The elm tree leaf beetle did not make its appearance in this Town the past season.

Now that we have the greater part of our main street laid out, the abutting land owners should be careful in cutting their forest land not to cut trees in the highway, as these are trees we shall wish to reserve as shade trees.

As Forester I would say that the Road Commissioners should keep our roadside trimmed out for the better protection from forest fires. There has been a number of miles cut out the past season and I hope we shall see the work completed the present year.

It is recommended by the agent of the State Board of Forestry that the Forester and Fire Wardens hold a meeting in the Town Hall each spring for devising ways for the better protection of our forests.

FRANCHISE GIVEN THE PLYMOUTH, CARVER &
WAREHAM STREET RAILWAY CO.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Town of Carver, Selectmen's Office.

In the matter of the petition of the directors of the Plymouth, Carver & Wareham Street Railway Company, dated July 21st, 1902, praying that said company may be granted a location in said Carver, with such turnouts, curves and switches as may be needed, together with the necessary poles, wires and other fixtures for the purpose of operating by electricity or other motive power except steam, from the Carver-Wareham to the Carver-Plymouth line, over the "New Road," so-called, Cherry Street, Rochester Road, Plympton Road, and Plymouth Road.

Said petition having been duly published and hearing having been held on the same, according to law, said Selectmen are of the opinion that public necessity and convenience require the granting of said location and said company is hereby granted an original location in said Carver, over and upon the following ways or highways:—

Beginning at Carver-Wareham line, thence over the Wareham road leading from Tremont to South Carver, to Cherry Street, thence over Cherry Street, so-called, to the Rochester-Plymouth road, so-called, thence over said Rochester-Plymouth road to the Plympton-Wareham road, so-called, thence over the Plympton-Wareham road to the road leading to Plymouth by way of Wenham, thence over the said Plymouth road to the Carver and Plymouth line. This grant of location is made expressly under and subject to the following terms, conditions and restrictions, which said board deems that the interests of the public require, to wit:—

1. The rails to be used by said company shall be of the pattern known as the "T" rail, weighing not less than sixty pounds to the yard, and the space between said rails shall be fitted to a level to the top of said rails with such material and in such manner as the Board of Selectmen may designate. In all matters of construction the work done and material furnished shall also be in accordance with the requirements of the Board of Railroad Commissioners.

2. The motive power to be used upon said track shall be electricity, used and applied by the system known as the overhead trolley, or such other power as the Selectmen may from time to time authorize. To guard against the effect of electrolysis the said company shall provide such connections for the return of the electric current and such form of bonding of rails as shall be satisfactory to the Selectmen, and said company shall provide such further precautions and make such changes and modifications as they may direct from time to time.

3. HENRY S. GRIFFITH,
Chairman By-Law Committee.

In the matter of Town By-Laws, after considerable research, we have arrived at the conclusion that the less By-Laws the more freedom, and as we regard freedom as the "paramount issue," we do not present a formidable array of articles, but simply report to the Town that it is "inexpedient to legislate."

Awaiting any further instructions and advising the Town to go slow, remembering that it is not so easy to annul a bad By-Law as it is to pass it, we are,

OLIVER L. SHURTLEFF,

SETH C. C. FINNEY,

Majority of the Committee on By-Laws.

OLD HOME WEEK.

The observance of Old Home Week in two successive years has met with a success far ahead of the anticipations of those who actively promoted the events, and the custom may be safely laid down as a permanent department of the town's current history. No event in our annual marches has called the people together and unified them in thought and action to the extent these celebrations have, and they can but result in great benefit to the town, not only in harmonizing the residents, but in recalling its absent sons and daughters, who annually return to their former homes to renew acquaintances of other days. Doubtless the weak points of past efforts will be strengthened by experience and the co-operation of our fellow-citizens, for in this humble way we can offer a testimonial to show our appreciation of the interest manifested so generously in the town by its former residents.

HENRY S. GRIFFITH.

In presenting our annual report our aim is to place the condition of our schools as vividly as we are able, before the citizens of the town. Our financial statistics are for the fiscal year ending Dec. 31; and our census and enrolment statistics for the natural school year ending August 31st.

The revolutionary theories in school matters can but be understood by looking back at the milestones. Time was when free schools were defended on the theory that the first duty of organized society was to protect itself, and it was argued that it would be more humane and cheaper in the end, to educate the youth, than to maintain police and prisons for their custody. The justification for this theory rests upon whether police, houses of detention, armies and navies, have kept pace with schools. Be this as it may, we have seen a revolution in school theories, but whether we have evolved a perfect system may be a matter for discussion.

In view of existing conditions of society, we hold that, to a certain extent, the old theory should still be in vogue, so how far we have a right to tax the people should be a matter not only for the consideration of the voters, but for the instruction of the young. The idea has been carefully nourished that there is no limit to school expenditures, and it is regarded as unpopular to criticise a proposition in school matters, whatever may be its nature.

While we admit that we cannot do too much for the education of our young, we are inclined to think there may be a point beyond which expenditures are superfluous.

The pupils must learn, we cannot "learn" for them by any amount of money or effort. The old adage: "There is no royal road to learning," appears to have been displaced by "The more sacrifices you make to the goddess of education, the more learning she will shower upon you." This, in our opinion, is erroneous. The youthful mind, like the youthful body, requires a stated time for development, and how to strengthen both in the allotted time—not how to puff both in half the time—should be our aim. An overfed body and mind should be avoided, for both can be weakened by indigestion.

In noting the changes in the methods of instruction, we are led to believe that a per cent. is chargeable to the prevailing epidemic of commercialism, and we are convinced that much of it will not stand the test of analysis from the standpoint of education. Permanent effect and not transient amusement is the end we should strive for.

The legitimate object of educating the young rests on a foundation deeper than the mere matter of pushing them through a prescribed "course" in the least possible time. To develop both mind and heart, to create a deeper respect for home and parents, to restrain evil tendencies, to ground the young mind in its duty towards civil government and human society, to enliven a sympathy for the animal world, to show that all have an honored place in life, and to prepare the adult for a judicial and tolerant career, in our opinion constitutes education, and to accomplish these results the instructors must cultivate qualities not always associated with scholastic training.

We have read statements from leading educators to the effect that the object of education is to prepare the student to escape the drudgery of their parents. This we should look upon as a false doctrine, which, if persisted in, will neutralize the moral effect of the school. Should our instructors hold out the promise that a few years spent in school entitles the pupil to a ticket which insures him against the burdens of life? Shall we be guilty of saying that labor is a degrading state which may be avoided by education? By so doing are we not poisoning the springs of society and swelling the army of "grafters"? To make the conditions of labor better, to make the next generation better mechanics and factory girls, better farmers and sailors, better merchants and manufacturers, better ministers and lawyers, and not mislead them with the mathematical absurdity that an education will ensure everyone a "soft snap" in life, should be the aim of public instruction.

POLITICAL SYSTEM.

We note with regret the tendency in this state to take the control of the schools from the hands of the parents and lodge it in the hands of a state bureau. The arguments which lead up to the change may be summed up in a current political maxim, Ultimo ratio regum.

The states of Michigan and Kansas, which boast of the best school systems of the Union, maintain the district system. A director, clerk, and treasurer, constitute the local board, and each township elects an inspector, who watches the progress of all the schools. These inspectors of a county hold annual meetings, at which a county board of examiners is chosen, and no teacher can make a valid contract with a local board who has not first obtained a certificate from the county board.

Such a system rests upon the theory that the people may be trusted with the welfare of their children, and it may be added that if the people are unwilling or incompetent to provide for the education of their young, they have fallen from a position they once held, and no state bureau can replace them.

Aside from the increased expense the new system involves, it tends to divorce the interest of the parents—a vital point in a true educational system.

That the home and school should go hand in hand should be read in both a literal and metaphorical sense. The home is above the school as an educational factor, and the aim of the school should be to assist and improve the influence of the home. Let the people entertain the thought that the school is tainted with political grafting and they will speedily cherish a contempt for it; let them see it is theirs and for their benefit and they will as speedily rally to its support.

The school should be the intellectual centre of the community, and not its haughty teacher. The schoolroom should be opened every night in the week as a reading room, a lecture room, a debating room for the discussion of public questions, and a social resort. It should compete with the saloon and grocery store for a share of patronage, and who would say its influence would not be beneficial? It seems to us that we could inculcate a respect for the flag by such acts of intelligent patriotism, which would produce a deeper effect than the superficial matter of taxing the people for flags and poles and enforcing patriotism by law.

Some of our schools have raised funds with which they have purchased organs for their schoolrooms, and we sincerely think the tones of these instruments are more harmonious than they would be had they been presented by the state.

CONSOLIDATION.

The policy of consolidating schools may be necessary in some instances, but it should not be encouraged. We should hold out all the inducements in our power to encourage the building up of rural communities and no inducement is more attractive than a schoolhouse. From the standpoint of taxation it is suicidal to encourage the depopulation of any of the communities which make up our town.

Your chairman does not subscribe to the theory that collecting a large school stimulates the learning capacity of the pupils. On the contrary, the moral and sanitary conditions are better in the small school, and the progress of a pupil intellectually cannot be better guaranteed than in a small school, where by individual training he may advance as fast as his aptitude and ambition will permit.

ABSENTEEISM.

This seems to be a chronic disease of our schools. Making due allowance for bad weather and sickness there are still many marks on the registers which should not be there. To say that a pupil who is absent one-fourth of the time loses one-fourth of the advantages of the school is not exact, for the absence of the pupil indicates a lack of interest when he is there. To compel a pupil to attend by enforcing the truancy act, falls short of the desired end, in that where a pupil goes against the wishes of himself and parents, he goes with no spirit, so the law should be enforced only in the most stubborn cases. The best method of carrying a point in this matter is to convince the parents of the necessity and enlist the interest of the pupil.

And while we are criticising the register in this departure, a more impressive thought is derived in imagining the black marks in a register kept by the parents in which would be entered the marks showing the absence of the teacher from the home. Does not this failure on the teachers' part give the impression in certain classes least benefited and most desirable of reaching, that the school is above them; when a false modesty makes the parent shrink from the association of the school? And so we would impress upon the teacher the benefits which might be derived from a closer association with the homes, which act would dispel the impression that there is such a thing as caste in the school.

FINANCE.

We realize we are treading on dangerous ground when we touch this department, and we are at a loss what to suggest in the way of retrenchment. To give the citizens of the town an idea of where our increased expenditures come in we make the following comparisons with like expenditures of 1895:

Raised by taxation in 1895,	$2,000 00
Raised by taxation in 1903,	4,900 00
Total school funds, 1895,	$2,835 55
Total school funds, 1903,	6,628 45
Paid teachers, 1895,	$2,131 25
Paid teachers, 1903,	3,655 00
Paid janitors, 1895,	$68 25
Paid janitors, 1903	266 55
Paid for fuel, 1895,	$128 69
Paid for fuel, 1903,	384 46
Text books and incidentals, 1895,	$148 64
Text books and incidentals, 1903,	813 74
Paid for fuel, High school building,	$258 75
Paid for fuel, other buildings,	125 71
Paid janitor, High school building,	$160 00
Paid janitors, other buildings,	112 55
Paid teachers, 1895,	$2131 25
Paid superintendent and supplies, 1895,	398 34
Paid teachers, 1903,	$3,655 00
Paid superintendent and supplies, 1903,	1,978 05
Cost per pupil, 1895,	$17 20
Cost per pupil, 1903,	30 18

In the fuel account the figures are slightly misleading, as some of the common schools had a supply left over from 1902, and the supplies for the High school will last more than a year. We are of the opinion that the text book and incidental account is unnecessarily overdrawn, but when we touch this subject we touch a system which is saddled upon the public and which a single town can throw off with difficulty, for the demands of a system in the public mind are as relentless as the edict of a statute.

The increase in the amount paid for teaching can easily be accounted for in the establishment of the High school and the division of the Centre school, and the increase in some other departments is beyond our control.

We must employ a superintendent in conjunction with other towns and his salary is fixed by law.

We must maintain a High school or pay tuition to other high schools. If we maintain a High school with only one pupil we must employ two teachers, or we do not comply with the law.

If we vote to build a new schoolhouse our authority ceases at that point. It would seem to us that the ventilating arrangements of a room in the country for the accommodation of a few scholars might be properly devised differently from such arrangements in a room in the city, under the conditions that implies; but we have no power of making laws to suit our case. If we would expect the allowance from the state we must maintain the average appropriations of the three preceding years. If we lower this average, we lose the $700 received from the state last year, which amount would then have to be added to the tax levv. It would thus appear that the door which leads to lower expenditures has been closed.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDENT.

To the School Committee of Carver:

Gentlemen—I report the number of pupils in the several schools as follows: South Grammar, 23; South Primary, 23; Centre Grammar, 16; Centre Primary 12; North Grammar, 21; North Primary, 29; Wenham, 10; Pope's Point, 12; Bates' Pond, 14; High School, 16; making a total of 176.

The report of attendance is already given in your report to the town.

Since the law gives the superintendent, or a teacher acting under instructions from a superintendent, the right to excuse only cases of necessary absence, and without a written excuse from the parents, a teacher has no means of knowing whether a pupil is absent necessarily or is playing truant, I would recommend that the committee request the parents to co-operate with the teachers in securing good attendance by providing them with such excuses.

There has been improvement in some of the work in all the schools in the town. Perhaps it is the most marked in the primary schools; and it is the most needed, not because it was poor before, but because it is the most important work done in any grade from the first to the end of the high school course. All the child's future school work depends upon it.

The aim in this work has been to secure facility, expression and comprehension of what is read. The ability to read easily makes the pupil more willing to read; it does not seem so much of a task. The study of expression helps them to better understand the author's thought and feeling, tends to refinement in both teacher and pupils, and later will help them to punctuate their own writing.

On their power to understand clearly what they read depends their ability to do good work in all their future studies.

The reading of complete selections from several authors has been done this year with good results. Pupils are getting a better appreciation of good literature. The Riverside Series, and other publications of the same class, make it possible to get the best reading at a small cost. This is done in addition to the reading in the regular reading books.

The teachers can do nothing better for their pupils than to stimulate and foster a taste for reading good live books. One of the best lists of books for young people that I know of is the Brookline "List of Books for Boys and Girls," published by the Brookline Public Library. It is to be had of the librarian at Brookline, Mass. It is a valuable aid to teachers in selecting reading for the pupils.

The use of the new arithmetics that have been introduced have given very satisfactory results. The pupils are learning to think and reason. The system is so different from that of the books formerly used that it causes a little difficulty in the higher grades, as certain things, which in these books are taken up in a simple way during the first two or three years, in the others were not touched upon until much later. These things then have to be taught for the first time, and the progress is necessarily slower; but those pupils who begin the series in the primary schools will not experience this difficulty. The work is so arranged as to give a constant review. The amount of business arithmetic given in the series is all that is needed by the ordinary boy or girl.

I wish to speak here of the value of a business course in schools. Pupils who take such a course in a high school, expecting that it will fit them for a business after completing it, and that they can at once obtain good, or even fair positions, are almost sure to be disappointed. They must get the most of their business training in a business house.

Within the past year I have sought opportunity to talk with many business men in regard to what they want young men and women to know, who come to them for work. Their answer is practically this: We want them to be sure of the four fundamental operations in arithmetic, to be able to spell, to write good English, and to have the best possible general education. If they have the general education, we will teach them how to do business.

A man who had been in successful business in a western city for 20 years said he had this year advised three boys of his acquaintance, who intended to leave high school for a business college, not to do so; but to go to some good house and offer to work for nothing for a year on the condition that they be taken into the office and taught the business. At the end of the year they would have saved the cost of tuition and books, have learned more than they could have in a business school, have had an opportunity to find out if they were likely to succeed in the work, if it was what they wanted, and they would also stand a better chance of securing employment. He advised them, however, to get a good high school education first, and to let that include a thorough training in the use of their own language. This last is absolutely necessary if one would become a stenographer.

If a business course is to be given in a high school it should continue for four years, be as broad as any other course, and include a thorough training in English and at least one foreign language.

Besides several new text books that have been added during the past year, there has been purchased for the grammar schools, globes, sets of wall maps: N. A., S. A., Europe, Asia, Africa, United States, West Indies and The World, and sets of dry, liquid, linear and cubic measures; and the primary schools have been supplied with some material for the work of their grades.

The new schoolhouse at North Carver is a very satisfactory building. Both the rooms are light, pleasant and convenient; and are well furnished with good blackboards.

The furniture is of the adjustable type, which makes it an easy matter to secure comfortable seats for all the children. It is a little higher in price than other makes, but is well worth the extra cost. I think that in both building and furniture the money was wisely expended.

Last year some changes were made in the course of study in the high school, to better prepare the pupils to enter normal schools, and to comply with the requirements of the state board of education, as a condition on which we receive $300 from the state for the support of the school.

In the regular course, pupils desiring it, take bookkeeping and commercial arithmetic in the senior year. To accommodate some who cannot complete the four years' course, these studies are taken the present term.

Some of the new text books adopted when the change was made in the course are as follows:

History—

Botsford's Ancient History for Beginners.

Robinson's History of Western Europe.

Coman and Kendall's History of England.

Channing's Student's History of the United States.

Science—

Carhart and Chute's High School Physics.

Shaw's Physics by Experiment.
Newth's Elementary Inorganic Chemistry.
Blaisdell's Practical Physiology.
Bergen's Elements of Botany.

Mathematics—

Williams and Rogers' Illustrative Bookkeeping.

Besides these a number of reference books have been added, including a set of Chamber's Encyclopedia.

Three large wall maps for the study of ancient history have been purchased: Kiepert's Ancient World, Ancient Greece and the Roman Empire; also a set of eight modern maps, such as have been put in the grammar schools.

A good laboratory for the study of chemistry and physics has been provided, and a well driven in the school room to furnish running water. At the time of fitting it up, and getting the physical apparatus, the class then studying physics had completed about one-half of the work of the text book, so that at that time sufficient apparatus for the remaining work of the year only was purchased; this portion of it, however, was much the most expensive. Before the opening of the fall term, that needed for the first half of the course, will have to be provided.

This year physics was not studied in the school, as the plan of having two classes taking physics together, alternating the following year with chemistry, is followed. Apparatus of the best quality for a good course in elementary inorganic chemistry, sufficient for individual work by each student, was purchased at the beginning of the fall term.

The slight acquaintance with literature that many of the pupils have on entering the high school makes it impossible to do the amount or quality of work that should be done in that study. The same is true of composition work. The only remedy for this in the future is to do more of it in the elementary schools, and it is now being done; but it will necessarily take several years for this to show in the high school. The school reading must be supplemented by much home reading to get the best results.

It is a pupil's ability to do what is required of him that determines his fitness to enter the high school. He cannot by any means be fitted for it in the last two or three years in the elementary school. His preparation begins in the first primary grades; and the teacher who teaches him to read understandingly there, is giving him the most needed help to fit him for the high school or for life.

Although a pupil's knowledge of history may be small, if he has learned how to study it, sees that it is not memorizing facts, but learning how a people grow, and how a nation is developed, and is sufficiently mature to comprehend it, he is fitted, so far as that study is concerned, for the high school. The same is true of the other studies.

If this view is correct, and I believe it is, any person, without regard to what his previous school advantages have been, should be encouraged to enter the high school, and take up any study he chooses, if it is given in the course, provided he is able to pursue it with profit.

This does not refer to those pupils just leaving the grammar schools, who should be required to take the regular course, unless circumstances prevent their doing so; but the school should be open and free to all who can in any way profit by it.

We would gladly welcome any who thought they had completed their school work, but who feel that they would like to get a further knowledge of literature or history, or would like to make some acquaintance with chemistry or botany. Such pupils would not interfere with work of the regular students. The school is well supplied with appliances for teaching these subjects.

I think the additions to the course of study and to the equipment of the school are appreciated by both teachers and pupils, and good use is being made of them.

I would say to the teachers that the greatest need of the school, and perhaps of all the schools, at present, is more training in English, in both speaking and writing it. I realize the fact that the high school is not the place in which this training should begin. I know that in most schools in town efforts are being made along this line that will show later on. This training is a slow process, but of great importance.

I feel that the teachers, committee and superintendent have worked together for the improvement of the schools, and that it has been a successful year.

REPORT OF LIBRARY TRUSTEES.

An increasing interest in the library is noted, owing in a large measure to the efforts of the public-spirited residents of the town. Since our last report branches have been established in North and South Carver, which have materially increased the number of patrons of the library. And the success of these efforts leads us to believe that the same methods may be pursued in other sections of the town with equally gratifying results. Rev. O. F. Stetson superintends the North Carver branch, while the teachers of the South Carver schools have given their services and shelves have been provided in the schoolrooms, where books can be procured at any time, and especially a half hour after school, which period has been set apart for that purpose. If such arrangements could be made with teachers at Bates' Pond, Pope's Point and Wenham, the advantages of the library could be enjoyed by all sections of the town.

We simply call your attention to the lack of room in the library for the increasing collection of books, and, while we make no suggestions, it is evident this problem will come up for solution in the near future.
