REPORT OF GYPSY MOTH.

The suppression of the Gypsy Moth is not so easy as first thought, they are here to stay. In watching their methods of scattering eggs through the woodland will it startle you if you stop to consider the outcome of this pest. In a town like Carver, with so many acres of woods to fight them in, for instance four different colonies in the South Meadow ceder swamp where there is no possible way for them to have been carried there only by birds—which I believe are the main distributors of this pest. I find a large gain over last year woodland colonies up to Feb. 1, 1909—fifty woodland colonies, comprising something like two hundred and twenty-five acres to be trimmed and sprayed this season.

At this time the Town is about half scouted, the north part of the town is infested dangeronsly, we find scattered colonies from East Carver to the Wareham line. The moth work in this town is under the directions of Mr. John A. Farley and Mr. Norman Souther, State inspectors, which are giving us all help possible. A colony of parasites will be liberated this spring and we hope good returns from them, which I believe is the only way to keep them down, but it will take time, as the Gypsy Moth has the start. Mr. Farley expects to be able to place a two-horse-power sprayer in town this year. There are 27 orchard colonies, which are more easily handled. Last year's wood colonies which we sprayed and burlaped we found but a few nests this winter, some places entirely exterminated.

In accordance with Massachusetts laws we will have to appropriate one twenty-fifth of one per cent. of the town's valuation, then above that the Commonwealth will reimburse the town for all expenses for the year.

REPORT OF PARK COMMISSIONERS, 1909.

To the Citizens of Carver-

The report of your Park Commissioners shows that we have expended $255.16, but does not show that the Town was reimbursed the sum of $500.00, the amount paid for the Park and which appears in our account of 1907. It was on account of this sum being refunded that we thought it advisable to lay out the above amount and put the Park in good condition at once. We have on hand about 10 cords of logs. There is but little more work to be done and as we have a small balance we think we can do the work and take care of the Park without asking for more money for the coming year.

REPORT OF CEMETERY COMMISSIONERS.

All we have used of the appropriation of one hundred dollars we have expended in the improvement of Lakenham cemetery with the exception of one dollar expended in Wenham. We adjudged this course prudent as Lakenham is the oldest cemetery in town and most in need of immediate attention. In grading the northerly bank in this yard we have not only added to its attractiveness but reclaimed space which otherwise would have gone to waste

Our expenditures from the Trust funds may be seen in the report of the Town treasurer who is trustee of these funds.

Since our Board was instituted, the Union cemetery has been incorporated which removes it from our jurisdiction. At the ensuing election we recommend the election of someone to represent Wenham cemetery; and we also recommend an appropriation of ? ? ?dollars for the ensuing year.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

School Committee and Citizens of Carver-

It is gratifying to report less changes in teachers this year than at any time since I have served as superintendent of schools. There were but two new teachers at the beginning of the fall term in September, Miss Irene Nichols at the Center Primary, and Miss Bessie N. Page at the North Grammar Miss Nichols is a graduate of the Hyannis Normal school. School, and had taught one year before coming to Carver. Miss Page is a graduate of the four years' course at the Bridgewa-The return of so many of our teachers ter Normal School. meant better work. There is a great loss to a school in changign teachers frequently, especially when the new teacher has had no experience. Although she may do very good work later, still, the children lose much by the change. The teachers are now Mr. George L. Spaulding, principal of the High School, second year, and Miss Louise H. Newton, assistant, second year; Bessie N. Page, North Grammar, first vear; Nellie L. Barker, North Primary, third year; Ellis G. Cornish, Center Grammar, tenth year; Irene Nichols, Center Primary, first year; Ethel H. Nash, South Grammar, second year; Marion C. Copeland, South Primary, second year; Mary McConnell, Bates Pond, second year; Blanche E. Holmes, Pope's Point, fourth year: Lulu A. Pratt, Wenham, third year. All of these teachers ought to be retained another year, if possible. Miss Nash resigned her school on January 9th, to accept another position. She was doing very good work this year. A substitute was secured for her position for three weeks, when Miss Copeland took the school, and Miss Dorothy Shaw, of Middleboro, took Miss Copeland's school.

The number of pupils in all schools at the beginning of the fall term in September was 202. During the term it rose to 261, and at the close of the term was 212, an increase of 12 over last year. The following table shows the comparative number of pupils in the schools for the past six years, and the loss or gain in individual schools.

Totals,	176	170	175	194	200	212	188	13pc.

It is seen that the total gain in pupils is considerable, but is not uniform in different parts of the town. This makes the number in some schools, especially the grammar schools, very The number in the North and Center Grammar , unequal. schools is very small; but in the South Grammar it is twice as great, and at one time during the fall term was three times as great, as the North Grammar. While there is a large primary school at North Carver, and a fair number in the lower grades of the grammar school, there are none above the seventh grade. There is a large fourth grade, however, to enter the grammar school another year, and as there are none to go out, it will number over 20. The number in the grammar and primary schools combined at South Carver is at present 60, and they are well divided. During part of the fall term there were 86. If this number should continue, or increase, a third room ought to be added, and a division of the pupils made into three groups, with three grades in each group. The number of pupils could easily be taught by the two teachers, if each had but two or three grades, but the teaching cannot be well done when each has four or five grades. While there is no means of knowing what the conditions will be in the future, yet reference to the table shows that the number in these schools has increased for a period of several years. The figures do not give the highest number enrolled in a school during the year, but the number at the beginning of the winter term, which is usually a fair average for the year.

There have been no changes in the course of study, or in text books, during the year. "Dickens Child's History of England" has been put in the seventh grades, to supplement "England's Story," the regular text book. The New Educational Music Reader has been put in most of the schools, and is proving satisfactory.

Of educational topics which claim our attention, that of Industrial Education is much the most important. There are several reasons for this: it has more recently come into prominence as a subject for consideration; it is so little comprehended that all who are interested in it are looking for some one to show what industrial education shall be, and how it shall be given; but perhaps the strongest reason is that all who give it any thought feel that it is greatly needed. While all who think about the matter at all agree that it is needed, they differ about the manner of giving it. Some claim that it can be given in the present public schools, that it should be given in connection with general education, and that to establish separate schools would be to duplicate what we already have, and add an unnecessary expense. Others think that it can not be satisfactorily given in the existing schools, that it can be given properly only in special schools. Neither side yet know what plan will prove the best; we have not had sufficient experience to guide us. It is claimed by many that the industrial school will, and should, supplant the general school; that the present school system is inadequate, and ought to be changed. It is inadequate, but it needs to be supplemented, not supplanted by the industrial school. The time is not likely to come when the majority of parents will not want for their children a broader education than will be given in the strictly industrial school. The general school has been in existence almost as long as the country itself, and has largely helped to make the country what it is.

Secretary Martin has pointed out three things, that should be taught more thoroughly in the general schools, that he believes to be essential to industrial efficiency: a command of English, a command of numbers, a command of drawing. These, he says, are as much the tools of a trade as are the plane of the carpenter, or the trowel of the mason. The English is the simple, direct English in which men at work give and take directions, in which they write orders and rules, and which theyuse in correspondence and in writing contracts and specifications, the English in which we carry on the common business By a command of numbers he means the ability to of life. make quick and accurate combinations of numbers, as they are needed in making measurements in any kind of work. These measurements are of lengths, surfaces, volumes, capacities, weight, time and money. That the number knowledge needed is simple is shown by the answer of a cashier, who has spent his life in a national bank, to the question as to what arithmetic should be taught a boy who would enter a bank. "The simplest possible; add, subtract, multiply and divide, and find interest for six months. That is all the arithmetic I have used By a command of drawing he means the abilfor 40 years." ity to represent, both by freehand and by instruments, readily and with sufficient accuracy, those things that we see or conceive that we wish to make or have others make. A former agent of the State Board of Education tells of a circumstance that occurred in the city of Springfield, that shows the worth of the power to draw readily. A builder called for bids for piping a large building he was to erect. All bids were to be accompanied by plans, and the bidder was to appear in person to explain them. None of these plans were satisfactory and all were asked to prepare new ones. One man immediately drew another set, but these were not entirely satisfactory. Another one was drawn, and accepted, and the contract awarded on the spot. He had been equally successful at other times. The other bidders may have been able to conceive equally good plans, but they could not readily show them to the builder. We need to have drawing taught in this town; but I have never been able to get the work well done without the direction of a special teacher. The cost is considerable, but it is greatly needed. The reason for the strong need of industrial education is that industrial life has become so scientific and complex that the old education is no longer sufficient by itself. Two illustrations of the value of thorough general education in addition to vocational, that came to my notice I think worth giving. In an office in Boston I noticed an exceptionally intelligent appearing stenographer. I asked the manager what salary he paid her. He replied, "80.00 per month." I asked if he could not get all the stenographers and typewriters he wanted for much less money. "Yes," he replied," if we should advertise today for a stenographer and typewriter, tomorrow so many would apply that there would not be standing room for them in the office." I asked what he would have to pay "$5.00 to $8.00 per week; and many of them would be them. pretty good stenographers and typewriters, too." "Then," said I. "what are this woman's qualifications that make her worth to you $80.00 per month?" His reply was, "She is widely read. She has a perfect command of English. Of course she is a good stenographer; but in addition to that, her general information is so great that if anything comes up that we do not know about, she knows just where to go to find it; she can answer eight out of ten letters that come to the office, without consulting us. She has a fine general education, in addition to her special training; therefore she is worth $80.00 per month to us." The other illustration was given me by Prof. Crosby, of the Department of Agriculture. He said there was in the office with which he is connected a young woman who receives a salary of $1,400 per year. She came to the office as a stenographer, with a good knowledge of the work, but not a specially good general education. Not having had such school advantages as she wanted, she was continuing her education by herself. Many foreign reports on agricultural matters come to the office, and it is necessary that they be read sufficiently to learn if they are worth translating and reprinting in English. Seeing that this would offer an opportunity for advancement, she took up the study of foreign languages in addition to her other study, and has become able to read French, German, Italian and Dutch reports sufficiently to give their contents to the Department. I think these two illustrations show the need of thorough general education in addition to vocational, for those who would prepare for responsible positions. The three questions to be answered in regard to industrial education are: What shall industrial education be? How shall it be given? What is the true balance between general and vocational education?

Another subject of general interest is the proposed Massachusetts College. It is well known that while Massachusetts has no less than fourteen colleges and universities, the cost of a college education in this state is so great that many young men have to go outside of the state to get it. There are 31 states outside of New England that have state colleges or universities giving free tuition. The proposed college is to be in no sense a state university, and cannot claim to supply the training of such an institution; but if the plan can be successfully carried out, it will be of great benefit to many who otherwise would have no education beyond the high school. The plan is to raise a fund of $3,000,000 by subscription. It has been started with a gift of $100,000 from one person. It is not to have a central building or collection of buildings, but instruction is to be given in many places throughout the state. Those likely to be selected in the eastern part of the state are Boston, Brockton, New Bedford, Plymouth, Barnstable and Fall River. It is expected that existing high and normal school buildings will be used. The curriculum will include English, ancient and foreign languages, history, economics, government, science and mathematics, the subjects offered in any college, leading to the degree matics, the subjects offered in any college, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The course will cover four years. It is expected that the cost to a regular student will average about $35.00 per year. The object is to give a college education to those who cannot meet the expenses of a four years' resident course at one of the present colleges. It is hoped that eventually a sufficient number of branches will be established to enable nearly all to reach them, and live at home. The plan certainly deserves to succeed.

In making any future report I would be glad to consider any questions in regard to the schools or school matters that parents or others may wish to ask.

Respectfully yours,

CHESTER W. HUMPHREY,

Superintendent.
